Subject: Adak, Alaska-City in crisis!

Governor Palin,

At the Partners for Affordable Energy roundtable held in Anchorage at the Hotel Captain Cook on August 5, 2008, I briefly talked to you about the potential benefits that Adak could possibly offer the State of Alaska in regards to fuel storage. Adak has the capacity to store up to 20 million gallons of fuel. Presently, the City of Adak is in a crisis situation.

On June 30th the Aleut Corporation received news from the City of Adak that they were nearly out of fuel to operate the City's diesel power generators. On Tuesday July 2nd, the City began power rationing by shutting down the power plant for periods of time to conserve fuel for critical activities.

For some time, our fueling subsidiary Aleut Enterprise, LLC (AE, LLC) has been working with the City of Adak in an attempt to avoid this type of situation, with no success. The City of Adak still owed AE, LLC about $320K for fuel on July 2nd 2008. The Aleut Corporation has a responsibility to over 3500 shareholders and its resources (financial and operational) are limited, so simply continuing to extend the City's credit uncapped and purchasing more fuel with monies that belong to all of our shareholders is not a decision we could make. However, allowing the residents and businesses to go without power for large blocks of time each day was not acceptable either. So, the Aleut Corporation worked out a temporary agreement with the City to continue to supply fuel for the power utility for a period of 60 days. We have been helping the City explore alternatives that may lead to a long-term solution that ensures the City's ability to generate power and our ability to get paid for fuel on Adak without success.

On September 2nd, the temporary fueling agreement with the City of Adak expired without a longer-term solution in place. AE, LLC has continued working with the City in an attempt to find a lasting solution. Part of the temporary agreement involved attempts to collect funds owed to the City by the local fish processor on Adak. Adak Fisheries has not been able to pay their bills this year due primarily to the predatory business practices of the Seattle-based Trident Seafood's Company who targeted the Adak Cod fishery and reduced the rural community on-shore processor's most recent harvest by 80%. With no money to collect, the City of Adak now owes AE, LLC more than $525,000. AE, LLC can no longer afford to carry this heavy debt for the City. The City of Adak is now power rationing once again and will be completely out of fuel by Sunday, September 14, 2008.

As if being cold and in the dark isn't hard enough, the Deputy Commissioner of Aviation & Airports, Christine Kline was nice enough to notify us today, Friday, September 12 that the FAA will be closing the Adak airport due to the lack of reliable power to their computer systems.

Closing the airport will stop all travel and delivery of supplies to the community. They will run critically low of provisions within a short period of time and will have no way off the island without the scheduled EAS (essential air service). No flights will also cut off access to external medical treatment and medivac flights, as already happened earlier this week for a suspected stroke victim. Without power and heat, the school will be closed and the electric powered sewer lift stations will not function.

The City of Adak is in an emergency situation and needs help beyond what we can provide locally. They need help from the State of Alaska to survive.

The City lacks leadership and needs immediate assistance to facilitate coordination between various State and Federal agencies that may be able to help provide grant money and / or loans to buy fuel. The City needs to bridge the next 3 to 4 months while they complete the sale of their utility to a new group who can better manage and fund the power generation. Your office's assistance would be a great service to this vulnerable, rural community. Please help them.

Thank you for your time and your immediate attention to this matter.

Governor Palin Appoints Marine Transportation Advisory Board Members

September 12, 2008, Anchorage, Alaska – Governor Sarah Palin today announced she has appointed William T. Beck, John "JC" Conley, Mark Eliason, Gerry Hope, Capt. William Hopkins, Clay Koplin, Mike Korsmo, Shirley Marquardt, Cathie Roemmich, Maxine Thompson and Robert Venables to the Marine Transportation Advisory Board (MTAB).

The 11-member board, comprised of representatives of a cross-section of Alaska communities, advises and makes non-binding recommendations to the state and the Alaska Marine Highway System (AMHS) on issues related to the state ferry system. The board was originally created by administrative order in 2003. Governor Palin reauthorized it by Administrative Order 240 in 2007, and established it in state law by signing House Bill 294 in June.

"The state ferry system is an essential part of the transportation system serving Alaskans across Southeast and Southcentral Alaska," Governor Palin said. "The benefits of this board can already be seen. In the past year and a half, MTAB has worked with the AMHS on fiscally responsible budgeting, route adjustments and schedules, and we've seen improved service, increased ridership, and schedules released earlier than ever before." Since 2007, passenger traffic from Sitka to Juneau is up 41 percent and vehicle traffic from Juneau to Petersburg is up 67 percent, she noted.

Beck, of Anchorage, fills an at-large public seat and also fulfills a requirement that the board include a resident of an area not directly served by the AMHS. Since 1992, he has been owner and manager of an Anchorage travel agency now known as Alaska Travel Source, and has held certification from the International Association of Travel Agents. From 1980-91 he worked as a commercial diver for an Alaska underwater construction service, and before that spent three years as a junior and high school science teacher in Petersburg. Beck earned a bachelor's degree in biochemistry and education from the University of South Carolina in 1977.

Conley owns Service Auto Parts in Ketchikan. He has served three terms on the Ketchikan Gateway Borough Assembly, and served twice as chair of the Ketchikan Chamber of Commerce and the Southeast Conference. Conley chaired MTAB when it was originally authorized by administrative order in 2003.

Eliason, of Anchorage, fills a seat reserved for a travel agent or tourism specialist familiar with AMHS reservation systems. Since 1985, he has been president and owner of USTravel, a diversified travel management company. Eliason has served on several travel industry boards, including the Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau, which he served as vice chair, and the World Travel Partners Affiliate Advisory Board. He is also a member of the Alaska Travel Industry Association.

He has been the transportation manager for the Sitka Tribe of Alaska since 2007, and was an elected member of the Sitka Tribal Council from 1999-2007. Hope serves in the Sitka Chamber of Commerce board of directors, and is the current president of the Alaska Native Brotherhood.

Hopkins, of Ketchikan, fills a seat reserved for a representative of a union representing AHMS employees. He retired from the ferry system in 2007 after 30 years of service. Hopkins has served as a marine pilot in Southeast and Southwest Alaska and in Puget Sound on all state ferry vessels except the ferry Wickersham and the system's high-speed craft. He served eight years as permanent master of the motor vessel Aurora and another eight years as permanent master of the ferry Kennicott. Hopkins is the author of two books, including, "Wrangell Narrows, Alaska," a mile-by-mile guide for mariners navigating the Inside Passage. He was first appointed to MTAB in 2007.

Palin Calls for a Halt to Offshore Fish Farm Proposal

September 12, 2008, Anchorage, Alaska – Governor Sarah Palin today expressed her administration's objections to elements of the federal government's proposal to allow decommissioned oil and gas platforms in federal waters to be used for fish farming and other forms of aquaculture.

"Alaska's natural wild fisheries have been well managed on a sustainable basis for years, and are critically important to our state's economy, especially in our coastal communities," said Palin. "Disease, parasites, and escapement of non-native stocks from fish farms are just some elements of the threat that aquaculture can pose to wild fish stocks."

Governor Palin's comments came in response to a Minerals Management Service (MMS) proposal that would allow offshore oil and gas platforms to be utilized for aquaculture. The Governor outlined several specific concerns, including:

• Marketplace confusion about Alaska's healthy, wild seafood resulting in lost fisheries value to the state;

• Disease and parasite transmission;

• Escapes/releases of farmed fish possibly leading to colonization by non-native fish species and genetic impacts on native species; and

• Environmental effects.

The state of Alaska has consistently requested that authorization of offshore aquaculture be considered only after establishing comprehensive biological and socio-economic baselines that will allow for a meaningful evaluation of its effects. The proposed rule does not include such provisions.

In a letter to Secretary of the Interior Dirk Kempthorne, Governor Palin requested that offshore aquaculture be removed from a list of authorized alternate rights-of-use for decommissioned platforms. In a separate letter, Governor Palin asked that the MMS schedule of public hearings in coastal states on the proposed rule be expanded to include public hearings in Alaska, where the potential for expansion of oil and gas development activity is great. In addition to concerns about potential impacts of offshore aquaculture, Governor Palin objected to MMS' regulatory authorization of offshore aquaculture when Congress is considering two bills authorizing such activity.

"This issue is of such importance to our coastal economy and environment that it deserves a thorough and comprehensive review by Congress and should not be authorized through regulation by an agency whose primary expertise is energy, not management of marine resources," said Palin.

If Secretary Kempthorne were to move forward with a proposed rule change allowing aquaculture activities in offshore federal waters, Governor Palin urged him to prohibit farming of certain species such as salmon, halibut and black cod. She further asked the secretary to allow each individual state the ability to decide for itself whether aquaculture should occur in federal waters off its shores.
